

CABBY INNOCENTLY HELPS SLEUTHS RAID

Two Young "Students" Taken to See Sights Fool Wise Night-Hawk.

CALL THE "GREEN CAB."

Vehicle Is Part of Police Station Fittings and All Hands Take Ride in It.

Arthur Bogert, a "night-hawk" cabman, was leaning against his old horse, Steerer, at Forty-seventh street and Broadway to-day, before the lights were dim, when along came two young men who looked pretty good to the cabby.

"Show you the town, gent?" rasped out Bogert.

"All right," replied the two, who appeared from their dress and state of hilarity to be college students. "Show us all the sights."

They climbed into the cab, and Bogert drove them to a house on West Forty-ninth street. It was brilliantly lighted and from within came musical sounds. Bogert told his fares that it was a fashionable concert hall—a Bohemian place, in fact, where merry revellers held sway. The two college students alighted, and followed by Bogert, entered the place.

A beautiful young woman in a gown that was a little low-cut, perhaps, but who was singing as they entered. The students listened, entranced, and when she finished her chanson they invited her to refresh herself.

It must have been about ten minutes later that one of the young college students stepped to the piano. The number he called was "3,109 Spring."

"Say, ask Joe to come around in the green cab," he urged. "Good fellow, Joe," he called to the group about the table. When Joe arrived with his green cab and an air of being a "good fellow," the students requested him to arrest the sweet singer who had just been singing Mabel Anderson, and a friend who had joined their merry party, called Ella Johnson.

The students, who at the West Forty-seventh street police station, where they had all ridden in Joe's funny green cab, suddenly turned into real sleuths. Lavery and Fox, said that one of the ladies had relieved Fox of his watch, and the other, thinking that Lavery carried too much money for a student, had taken $10 for safekeeping. Bogert, the cabman, went, too.

KILLED IN PIT BY A TROLLEY COLLISION

Car Bumped by Another In Barn Falls On Man Working Under It.

A collision between two street cars in the barn at Lexington avenue and Ninety-ninth street early to-day caused the instant death of Daniel Sullivan, a carpenter.

Sullivan was in the pit working on the bottom of one of the cars, when the other, in charge of Christopher J. Stark, was run into the barn and on to the same track. Stark did not see Sullivan in the pit and allowed his car to bump into the one standing still. He miscalculated the force of the bump, however, and the car on which Sullivan was working flew up at one end and down at the other and crushed the skull of the workman.

Dr. Moockle, of the Harlem Hospital, was called, but was too late, and the Coroner was notified. The police arrested Stark, who is thirty-three years of age, at No. 422 East One Hundred and Thirty-fourth street. Magistrate Crane, in the Harlem Police Court, remanded him to the Coroner. Sullivan was thirty years old and lived at No. 1516 Lexington avenue.

POPULAR PEASE PIANOS

The Purchase of a Piano

is different from that of any other article; if purchased wisely, but one purchase is made in a lifetime. Think, then, how carefully one should be in his selection!

There is no risk in buying a "Pease." Over 78,000 people have bought them in the last 64 years and been satisfied. Prices moderate; 3 years to pay if desired. Used Pianos from $125 up. Renting, exchanging. Write for catalogue.
